Section 3 - Principles

Recruitment Principles

(4) Excellence - The University is committed to attracting, onboarding and retaining highly skilled, well qualified, experienced employees who embody the spirit and culture of the University, and provide excellent, innovative teaching, research, research training and administrative support to University functions.

(5) Strategic alignment - The University's search and selection practices support the achievement of the University's strategic and operational objectives. Decisions to recruit should be made in the context of workforce planning and to consistently improve the performance and standing of the University.

(6) Equity and transparency - The University's search and selection methods ensure adequate assessment that delivers high quality decisions considered against the key capabilities and flexibility to ensure that candidates are not eliminated from the process unfairly. All involved in talent acquisition must actively consider any personal unconscious biases.

(7) Merit based selection - The University is dedicated to ensuring an equitable and efficient method for making employment decisions. Evaluating the applicant's pertinent abilities, expertise, conduct, and background in comparison to the job prerequisites will ascertain the most suitable candidate.

(8) Compliance - The University complies with all relevant legislation in the selection and appointment of employees (including working rights, qualifications, employee background checking).

(9) Candidate care - The University seeks to attract highly skilled, well qualified, experienced candidates, by defining roles accurately and advertising vacancies appropriately. Candidates should be treated with respect and communicated with in a timely manner. Shortlisted candidates should be provided with post-interview feedback by the selection panel. Where psychometric assessments are utilised, qualified administrators will interpret and provide results to the selection panel, and to the candidate upon request. All candidates have a right to privacy and confidentiality which will be respected by the University and its employees.

(10) Gender equity - The University proactively promotes gender equity and encourages specific action to increase, in particular, the representation of women in STEM areas.

(11) Diversity and inclusion - The University values diversity and equal opportunity and seeks to embody these values in its employees. The University promotes a diverse and inclusive workforce by encouraging members of underrepresented groups to consider employment with the University.

(12) Efficiency - The University recognises that timely decision making is critical in securing the best possible candidate, and all processes should be conducted without undue delay. The University encourages use of technology and flexibility and recommends panel sizes proportionate to the position being filled with relevant skills and experience on the panel, and shortlisting of appropriate numbers of candidates to allow for an efficient process.

(13) Recognising existing talent - The University is committed to development opportunities for our people. From time to time, suitably skilled internal candidates may be available for transfer to other roles.
