(19) International applicants must also satisfy Genuine Student and Genuine Temporary Entrant Requirement.

Proficiency in English

(20) There are three categories in which applicants can demonstrate English language proficiency to a level that meets the minimum requirements for admission to an HDR course, detailed below in clauses 23-28.

(21) The PhD Clinical Psychology has specific English language proficiency requirements which are detailed in the Courses and Units Database on the University's website.

(22) The University reserves the right to request that the applicant undertake an English language test in addition to any other evidence of English proficiency provided.

Category One

(23) Applicants are considered to have met the minimum requirements under Category One if they have achieved the requisite result from a recognised English language test.

(24) The University accepts the following English language tests:

(27) Previous study under this category does not expire as evidence of English proficiency.

Category Three

(28) Applicants meet the English language requirements under Category Three if they have completed two years (full time equivalent) study at Bachelor level or a postgraduate qualification assessed as equivalent to an Australian Masters course, in one of the countries or territories listed at Category Two, where the language of instruction and assessment was English.

(29) Previous study under this category is valid as evidence of English proficiency for a period of two years from the date of completion of the qualification (to the date of application).

Making a Case for English Language Equivalency

(30) If an applicant does not meet the English proficiency requirements listed above and is able to provide alternate evidence of English language proficiency, a case for English language equivalency may be made by the host Faculty.

(31) A case for equivalency must be submitted by the Faculty to the Dean, Graduate Research School, and include a written statement of support and supporting evidence (see Guidelines for English Proficiency Equivalency for HDR Admission).

Offshore Candidature

(32) Applicants who wish to undertake their course partially or completely offshore (outside of Australia) are subject to the admissions requirements in the Higher Degree by Research Admission Policy and this Procedure, including English language requirements.

(33) The Faculty must assess whether the candidates' proposed project can be successfully undertaken offshore, and the applicant and Faculty must complete an Offshore Candidature Management Plan as part of the admission process, which will consider:

- a. whether the candidate will be able to meet the minimum attendance requirements outlined in the Higher Degree by Research Enrolment and Changes to Candidature Policy or is required to request an exemption;
- b. the availability of appropriate remote supervisor arrangements with an experienced supervisory panel willing to support the remote candidature;
- c. the availability of adequate resources, equipment and facilities to support the proposed research, including reliable internet access, and access to alternate University support services;
- d. the requirement for a contingency plan for completion of the project entirely offshore should the candidate be unable to travel to the Australian Capital Territory (ACT), Australia, for the duration of the course or is not approved for a Student Visa.

(34) Detailed guidance on considerations is outlined in the Guidelines for Managing Offshore or Off-Campus Candidature.

Off-Campus Candidature

(35) Domestic candidates are permitted to undertake part of their research away from the University's Bruce Campus, ACT without explicit approval if they comply with the minimum attendance requirements for their course (see Higher Degree by Research Enrolment and Changes to Candidature Policy).

(36) Domestic candidates who request to undertake their entire candidature off-campus (remotely) will be required to request an exemption to the minimum attendance requirements (see Higher Degree by Research Enrolment and Changes to Candidature Policy) and the Faculty must assess whether the candidates' proposed project can be successfully completed off-campus, and consider the provisions detailed in the Guidelines for Managing Offshore or Off-Campus Candidature.

(37) International candidates on a Student Visa are required to remain enrolled on campus at the University's Bruce Campus, ACT for the duration of their course, unless their research requires them to reside away from campus, or unless they have been given approval to study offshore.

Applicants Transferring from Another Institution

(38) Candidates who have commenced an HDR course at another Australian institution and apply to transfer their research to the University are subject to the admissions requirements detailed in the Higher Degree by Research Admission Policy and this Procedure.

(39) In addition, the candidate must provide:

- a. evidence of satisfactory progress at their current institution (via provision of referees' reports, copies of progress reports and evidence of milestone completion, including confirmation of candidature if applicable);
- b. a full research proposal, including an outline of expected resources and conditions required to complete the research (e.g. field trips, specialised computer software etc.) and a timeline for completion in consultation with their proposed supervisor;

- c. work completed to date towards the research/thesis (e.g. draft chapters);
- d. an estimated submission date for the thesis; and

(40) Candidature undertaken at another Australian institution towards an HDR course within a three-year period prior to the commencement of the University course will reduce the total period of candidature of the course to which they are admitted.

(41) For domestic candidates, prior candidature undertaken at an Australian institution within the prior three-year period is used to calculate the remaining Research Training Program funding available for their course. Information on Research Training Program eligibility and entitlements is available on the Research Training Program website.

Offers of Admission

(42) The Faculty Executive Dean, on advice from Associate Dean, Research and/or HDR Convener, is responsible for recommending admission to an HDR course to an Admissions Officer.

- b. the applicant is awaiting qualification results or course completion (e.g. Honours result); or
- c. the applicant is yet to provide verified documents (e.g. transcripts, passport), provided that unverified copies have been submitted in the interim.

(44) Applicants must meet all conditions outlined in their Letter of Offer before the University will accept them into the course.

(45) An offer of admission will lapse if not accepted by the acceptance date specified in the Letter of Offer.

Offers Conditional on English Language

(46) Applicants who have met the academic requirements for a course but have not met the minimum English proficiency requirements, are eligible to receive a conditional or packaged offer, as outlined below:

Deferrals

(48) Offers of admission may be deferred for a minimum of six months and a maximum of twelve months from the course commencement date in the Letter of Offer, subject to Faculty approval. The applicant must advise the University that they wish to defer prior to the acceptance deadline detailed in the Letter of Offer.

(49) International applicants with a deferred status are guaranteed admission subject to the following conditions:

- a. the applicant's eligibility for admission does not change;
- b. the deferment period is no longer than twelve months from the course commencement date on the original Letter of Offer;
- c. the University still offers the course to which the applicant was originally admitted. Where the University no longer offers the course in the original area of research, the applicant may be offered a place in another comparable course provided they would have been eligible for admission to the course when the initial offer of place was made;
- d. the fee type status of the applicant remains unchanged;
- e. the Faculty has appropriate supervision available; a different supervisory panel may be assigned to the student depending on available resources when the student commences their HDR course following a period of deferment, and the applicant may be required to revise their research proposal at the time of commencing their HDR course, as directed by the appointed supervisory panel.

(50) A person who has a deferred offer but who wishes to obtain admission to a different course must complete a new application for admission to the alternative course.
